Question Two: (23 points)

Read the following text carefully, and then in your ANSWER BOOKLET, answer all the questions that follow. Your answers should be based on the text.

Have you heard that the Inuit have hundreds of different words for snow? The theory goes that because snow is so much more present in their lives, and often of vital importance, they actually perceive it differently, and recognise more subtle distinctions between different types of snow and ice than those of us living in warmer climes. In fact, this theory is something of a myth, not least because there isn't a single Inuit language, but a variety of dialects. However, recent research has shown that there is at least some truth in the idea that these dialects have more ways of distinguishing different types of snow than many other languages do. The key question though, isn't really whether there are more words to describe frozen water so much as whether this implies that the languages spoken by the Inuit mould the way they conceive of the world. This concept is referred to as linguistic relativity or, more famously, the Sapir-Whorf hypothesis, after two scientists who both wrote, separately, about this idea.

That said, many people do feel they take on a new identity when using another language. A 2006 study of bilingual Mexican-Americans asked them to take a personality test in both English and Spanish. Amazingly, the results varied, depending on which language each individual was using. Undoubtedly, how much you pick up a culture alongside a language will depend on how and why you are learning it, and whether you wish to become part of the second language culture, but it's fascinating to consider that you might actually be a (slightly) different person when speaking a second language.

1. Quote the sentence which points out the shortcomings of a piece of research. (4 points)
2. Picking up a culture alongside a language depends on many factors. Write down two of them. (6 points)
3. The text states two reasons behind the theory. Write them down. (4 points)

5. Find a word in the text which means to influence or change. (2 points)
6. Moulding your personality may rely on many factors. Suggest two factors you believe may mould you. (4 points)

Question Three: (21 points)

A- Read the following text carefully, and then in your ANSWER BOOKLET, answer all the questions that follow. Your answers should be based on the text.

So, what do sports psychologists actually do, and what qualifies them to do it? In terms of qualifications, degree courses in sports psychology are widely offered at universities around the world. Alternatively, those with an undergraduate degree in psychology may add to it by pursuing specialist postgraduate studies such as sports medicine or physiology. The discipline typically combines research and theory with the applied practice of psychology in physical exercise and sports. Qualified sports psychologists help sportspeople to be mentally prepared for effective training and optimum performance, but let us look in more detail at how they do this.

Sports psychologists use strategies that help players to focus on their aims. These may include goal-setting or visualisation, which are techniques that have been shown to improve concentration and performance. Professional sportspeople require extensive resilience, which sports psychologists help them to maintain, as well as strategies for being positive or remaining calm in difficult moments. They also teach coping skills for dealing with anxiety and intense career stress – for example, using muscle relaxation, breathing exercises and meditation. When players get injured, the sports psychologist supports them through their recovery with a customized programme for their physical pain management as well as their mental wellness. If a player's confidence becomes eroded by an injury they have sustained, the sports psychologist works closely with them, strategically building the player back up to a position of self-belief.

1. The text states two ways to be a qualified sports psychologist. Write them down. (4 points)
2. Sports psychologists teach players many coping skills. Write down three of them. (3 points)
3. What happened when the player's confidence eroded by specific reason? (4 points)

5. Write down the sentence which indicates examples of strategies that help students to focus on their aims. (4 points)

B- Read the extract from Black beauty by Anne Sewell and then answer the following question.

Our master was a good, kind man. He gave us good food, good lodging, and kind words; he spoke as kindly to us as he did to his little children. We were all fond of him, and my mother loved him very much. When she saw him at the gate she would neigh with joy and trot up to him. He would pat and stroke her and say, "Well, old Pet, and how is your little Darkie?" I was a dull black, so he called me Darkie; then he would give me a piece of bread, which was very good, and sometimes he brought a carrot for my mother. All the horses would come to him, but I think we were his favourites. My mother always took him to the town on a market day in a light gig
